Negotiating the relentless pull of the mate bond is tough.

Especially when one is still traumatized by memories of childhood sexual abuse and the other point blank refuses to acknowledge (out loud at least) that there is a mate bond at all.

While Pierce tries to deal with the aftereffects of her new and "unpierced" self, Lucas relives the week leading up to that fateful night when he was forced into doing the one thing he vowed he never would - inflict his disease on another human being.

As if he didn't hate himself enough already.

As she attempts to come to terms with the new her - the Pierce that is stronger, faster and less reliant on her former "dependencies" - she begins to settle into an unfamiliar, yet longed for, "normal" life with her newfound circle of family and friends. Pierce is finally able to do what her maker never could - embrace, accept and thrive from what she has become.

With Pierce's not-so-subtle help, Lucas comes face to face with the fact that maybe it's time for him to start coming to terms with this "affliction" too.

??? But it is not going to be easy.

Especially when they come into contact with another pack for the first time.

Editorial Review

Review
This was originally published as Book 2, but had to be changed to Book 3 when the original Book 1.5 (Escaped - a novella) had to be changed to Book 2.

About the Author
J. C. Mells has had every job from an ice cream truck driver to chocolate factory worker to waiting tables in a Las Vegas casino. She grew up in the Middle East (Abadan, Iran) and Spain (Fuengirola, Costa Del Sol) and finally ended up finishing High School in England (Weymouth, Dorset). J. C. emigrated to the United States in 1990, and returned to school at the ripe old age of 28, where she obtained a BA and then two MA degrees - all in New York, NY. (Hunter College, NYU and Columbia, respectively) She has traveled extensively, including a 3 month stay in India, but has finally settled in Las Vegas, NV of all places where she has been living for the last 7 years with her two "babies" Alabama Worley Mells and Persephone Jayne Mells. (Why is it all writers have cats...?). While she does share her heroine's love for reality TV and trance music, she can't cook to save her life!
