Editorial Review

From Library Journal
White (The New Astrology , 1986, St. Martin's) explains in her latest book the ancient art of Chinese astrology while at the same time sharing some of her varied life experiences as a model and seller of fireworks. While her previous book combined Western and Chinese astrology, gaining her a reputation as an astrologer, this one provides a basis for understanding astrology in terms of Chinese animal signs based on character descriptions, with some signs based on the author's own life. White's combination of the traditional and the personal makes the book enjoyable reading and gives insight into the development, characteristics, future, and compatibilities of the Chinese signs. This will be an informative book for popular library collections.
